Firefox 4	1.9.3	3.7a1	Mozilla Developer Preview 3.7 Alpha 1	February 10, 2010	First Firefox 3.7 alpha release. Support for WebGL(Disabled by default, but can be enabled by changing a preference). Support for new CSS, DOM and HTML5 web technologies.[174]
		3.7a2	Mozilla Developer Preview 3.7 Alpha 2	March 3, 2010	Second Firefox 3.7 alpha release. On Windows and Linux, plugins (such as Flash and Silverlight) are now isolated from Firefox. Plugin crashes will not kill Firefox itself, and unresponsive plugins are automatically restarted. The SSL security system has been changed to fix a renegotiation flaw. Link history lookup is now performed asynchronously on a thread. Loading the HTML5 specification no longer causes very long browser pauses. Some JavaScript engine improvements. The stop and reload buttons have been merged when they are adjacent on the toolbar. More performance and stability improvements.[175]
		3.7a3	Mozilla Developer Preview 3.7 Alpha 3	March 17, 2010	Third Firefox 3.7 alpha release. An experimental Direct2D rendering backend on Windows is available, turned off by default. Significant API improvements are available for JS-ctypes. Mozilla now uses an infallible allocator. Additional fixes for multi-process plugins.[176]
		3.7a4	Mozilla Developer Preview 3.7 Alpha 4	April 12, 2010	Fourth Firefox 3.7 alpha release. CSS :visited selectors have been changed to block ways that websites can quickly check a user's browsing history. Currently loaded web pages are shown in the location bar autocomplete list, allowing switching to existing tabs. The beta version of Adobe Flash is now run in a separate process on Mac OS X Snow Leopard (10.6). Full-screen video on Windows is now rendered using hardware acceleration when available. Mozilla has implemented the Core Animation rendering model for plugins on Mac OS X. Linux builds are now built with -fomit-frame-pointer. Support for new SVG and HTML5 web technologies.[177]
		3.7a4webm	Mozilla Developer Preview 3.7 Alpha 4 WebM	May 19, 2010	Added WebM video playback.
		3.7a5	Mozilla Developer Preview 3.7 Alpha	June 14, 2010	Fifth Firefox 3.7 alpha release. First official release to include linux-x86_64 and mac-x86_64 builds and first regular release to include

		5		WebM video playback. New Addons Manager (placeholder UI only). Tab on Top can now be implemented. Firefox now uses hardware acceleration for video playback. Cocoa NPAPI support. ChromeWorker with jsctypes support. Lazy frame construction for faster dynamic pages. JavaScript performance improvements. Loading the URL about:memory now shows how much memory is used by different parts of Firefox. More Performance improvement and support for new CSS and HTML5 web technology.[178]
2.0	4.0b1	Firefox 4.0 Beta 1	July 6, 2010	First Firefox 4.0 beta release. Tabs are now on top by default on Windows. On Windows Vista and Windows 7 the menu bar has been replaced with the Firefox button. The Bookmarks Toolbar has been replaced with a Bookmarks Button by default (you can switch it back if you'd like). Support for more HTML5 technologies.[179]
	4.0b2	Firefox 4.0 Beta 2	July 27, 2010	Second Firefox 4.0 beta release. Tabs are now on top by default on OSX. App Tabs can now be created. Content animation using CSS Transitions can now be implemented. Responsiveness and scrolling improvements from the new retained layers layout system. JavaScript speed improvements due to engine optimizations. Changes to how XPCOM components are registered in order to help startup time and process separation.[180]
	4.0b3	Firefox 4.0 Beta 3	August 11, 2010	Third Firefox 4.0 beta release. Web authors can now get touch events from Firefox users on Windows 7 machines. A new way of representing values in JavaScript that allows Firefox to execute heavy, numeric code (used for things like graphics and animations) more efficiently.[181]
	4.0b4	Firefox 4.0 Beta 4	August 24, 2010	Fourth Firefox 4.0 beta release. Firefox Sync is now included. Panorama, a new feature that gives users a visual overview of all open tabs, allowing them to be sorted and grouped, is now included. An experimental API is included to provide more efficient Javascript animations. Firefox now supports the HTML5 video "buffered" property.[182]
	4.0b5	Firefox 4.0 Beta 5	September 7, 2010	Fifth Firefox 4.0 beta release. Support for the new proposed Audio Data API. Direct2D Hardware Acceleration is now on by default for Windows 7 users. Firefox button has a new look for Windows Vista and Windows 7 users. Support for HSTS security protocol allowing sites to insist that they only be loaded over SSL.[183]
	4.0b6	Firefox 4.0 Beta 6	September 14, 2010	Sixth Firefox 4.0 beta release. Fixed a stability issue affecting Windows users. Fixed an issue causing rendering errors with plugins affecting Mac OS X users.[184]
	4.0b7	Firefox 4.0 Beta 7	November 10, 2010	Seventh Firefox 4.0 beta release. Uses JägerMonkey, a new, faster JavaScript engine. WebGL is enabled by default on Windows and Mac OS X. Certain rendering operations are now hardware-accelerated using Direct3D 9 on Windows XP, Direct3D 10 on Windows Vista and 7, and OpenGL on Mac OS X. Improved web typography using OpenType with support for ligatures, kerning and font variants. HTML5 Forms API makes web based forms easier to implement and validate.[185]
	4.0b8	Firefox 4.0 Beta 8	December 21, 2010	Eighth Firefox 4.0 beta release. The Firefox Sync setup experience has been greatly improved across desktop and mobile devices. Speed, functionality, and compatibility improvements to WebGL. Additional polish for the Firefox Add-ons Manager.[186]
	4.0b9	Firefox 4.0 Beta 9	January 14, 2011	Ninth Firefox 4.0 beta release. Overhaul of the bookmarks and history code, enabling faster bookmarking and startup performance. Per-compartment garbage collection is now enabled, reducing work done during complex animations.[187]
	4.0b10	Firefox 4.0 Beta 10	January 25, 2011	Tenth Firefox 4.0 beta release. Compatibility and stability improvements when using Adobe Flash on Mac OS X. Improvements in memory usage. Support for a graphics driver blacklist to improve stability.[188]

	4.0b11	Firefox 4.0 Beta 11	February 8, 2011	Eleventh Firefox 4.0 beta release. Support for the proposed Do Not Track ("DNT") header. Connection status messages are now shown in a small overlay. WebGL has been re-enabled on Linux. The default homepage design has been refreshed. Firefox no longer switches into offline mode automatically.[189]
	4.0b12	Firefox 4.0 Beta 12	February 25, 2011	Twelfth Firefox 4.0 beta release. Increased performance while viewing Flash content. Improved plugin compatibility with hardware acceleration enabled. Hovering over links now displays the URL at the bottom of the window rather than in the location bar. General stability, performance, and compatibility improvements.[190]
	4.0 RC1	Firefox 4.0 Release Candidate 1	March 9, 2011	First Firefox 4.0 release candidate. General stability, performance, and compatibility improvements.[191]
	4.0 RC2	Firefox 4.0 Release Candidate 2	March 18, 2011	Second Firefox 4.0 release candidate. Blacklisted a few invalid HTTPS certificates. Updated localizations for 29 locales. Added Vietnamese localization, bringing the total languages available in Firefox 4 to 83. [192]
	4.0	Firefox 4.0 "Tumucumaque"	March 22, 2011	Official Firefox 4.0 release. Identical to 4.0 RC2.[193]
